DAMIANA.

ITS HISTORY—PHYSIOLOGICAL PROPERTIES—NOTES FROM SCIENTIFIC PRACTISING PHYSICIANS ON ITS EFFICACY.

I.—History of the Damiana Plant.

This plant is a native of Mexico, and its nervine and invigorant properties seem to have been known to the natives of that country prior to the coming of the Spaniards. The Franciscan missionary, Father Juan Maria de Salvatierra, writing in the year 1699, mentions Damiana among the popular domestic Medicines in use among the native population, who highly prized it for its special action in repairing exhausted energies, and in restoring to full vigor the nerve-force exhausted by fatigue or by excesses. Thus the Indian hunters, when faint and wearied after a protracted tramp in search of game, were wont to make a decoction of Damiana, and this they drank freely, with the result that on the morrow they were ready to undertake the same labors with powers renewed. Indeed, to this day the country people in Mexico look on Damiana as a sort of panacea, or cure for all bodily ills. But its specific action, its distinguishing property, is the effect it produces as a permanent tonic to the reproductive system in both sexes. The efficacy of Damiana in permanently stimulating nerve-force where that force is naturally or congenitally defective, and in restoring it to the normal condition where it has been impaired, and manhood's power lost or diminished, is noticed by Father de Salvatierra, and has been fully recognized by practitioners of medicine in Mexico. Singularly enough, the specific properties of Damiana were practically unknown to the world outside of Mexico and Utah till the year 1874, when Dr. John J. Caldwell, of Baltimore, called the attention of the medical profession of the United States and of Europe to its very remarkable virtue as an aphrodisiac.

It is a curious coincidence that in the famed Temple of Diana at Ephesus, the most gorgeous and beautiful halls were called the "Damiana Corridors," or the "Abode of Love."

II.—Botanic Characters of the Damiana Plant.

The Damiana Plant (Turnera Aphrodisiaca) is thus described by Prof. Lester F. Ward, of the Smithsonian Institution, Washington :

"Calyx tubular, funnel-form, the lobes shorter than the tube. Styles three, distinct. Stigmas flabellate. Stems woody, the branches reddish, densely canescent or lanulose, as well as the petioles and lower portion of the midrib. Leaves obovate to oblanceolate, six to nine lines long, two to three lines wide, on short petioles, strongly crenate-dentate, the teeth with revolute margins, prominently veined beneath, nearly glabrous above, glandular below, bearing fascicles of smaller leaves in their axils, together with their flowers. Flowers short pedicled or nearly sessile, axillary or petiolary, i.e., developed either from the centre of axillary fascicles of minute leaves, or from between these and the base of the petioles, or, in some cases, from the petiole itself above its base ; bibracteolate, the bracts obovate, long acuminate, ciliate. Anthers somewhat sagittate, introrse, the cells thin, ovaries dehiscent from the apex to near the base. Seeds large, long kidney-shaped or curved, grooved lengthwise and pitted ; only a few maturing, the rest abortive and persistent."

We may as well observe here that, owing to the scarcity of this plant (the true Damiana), and its consequent high cost, there is in most samples we have seen in this country very little resemblance to the plant herein described, and even the best samples are more or less mixed with other plants.

In the manufacture of the Mormon Elders' Damiana Wafers we use only the true Damiana, selected and gathered under the immediate supervision of a skilful and experienced Botanist, whose business it is to gather in season, and cure with the utmost care, the best Damiana expressly for our use.

III.—Specific Physiological Action of the Damiana Plant.

It exerts a powerful influence upon the urinogenital organs: this is almost universally admitted by all medical writers who have treated of the plant. It gives to these organs a tonicity and vigor which tend to permanency, instead of being merely temporary, as when strychnia, phosphorus, or electricity are employed. The latter agents are simply stimulative; Damiana is reparative, reconstructive—a powerful, permanent, and determined aphrodisiac.

Where manhood's characteristic energies have been dissipated by vicious courses, the resultant disability is almost invariably overcome by proper treatment with Damiana. Says Dr. A. B. Woodward: "Damiana has a direct action on the brain: as a brain stimulant especially do its effects appear to be manifest upon the basilar portion, and in this way upon the REPRODUCTIVE ORGANS." (New Preparations, May, 1879.)

A very significant observation is made by Dr. C. G. Polk, who writes that Damiana is not a direct stimulant of erotic desires, and that "in several cases of abnormal sexual appetite it has acted as a calmative." But he adds that it imparts "tone and vigor to the organs." This fully confirms what has been already said as to the permanency of the effects produced by Damiana: it is not simply a stimulant like a dram of brandy: it appears really to repair and build up the nerve-tissues that have been exhausted by excesses or imprudence.

Says Dr. T. C. Brannon, Brannon's Store P. O., Texas: "Damiana is a gentle, efficient stimulant of the cerebellum and medulla oblongata, extending its stimulant and tonic effect to the renal and genital organs." This effect is best produced by taking daily four of the

WAFERS, one at each of the three meals, and one on going to bed at night. (Therapeutic Gazette, 1880.)

Similar testimony as to the effects of Damiana is borne by Dr. Willard H. Morse, Hinsdale, N. H. "Damiana," he says, "has a strong influence on the urino-genital organs. I can say in its favor that it relieves sexual debility, and has a POWERFUL INFLUENCE OVER IMPOTENCY.

"The effects of Damiana are quite different from those of strychnine, phosphorous, or cantharides, which are given in small doses, for the purpose of obtaining immediate results. It acts, not as an irritant, but as a stimulant of the brain, and a tonic of the nerve centres governing the urino-genital apparatus, and its use has to be continued for several weeks. Its effects are chiefly noticeable on the sympathetic nerve, and when taken in large doses it produces a peculiar intoxication, attended with slight pains in the prostatic region. Its good effects on the KIDNEYS, the BLADDER, and the GENITAL ORGANS are also manifest." (Therapeutic Gazette, May, 1882.)

"I can bear testimony to the efficacy of this plant in cases of sexual debility or lethargy OF THE SEXUAL ORGANS. In these cases the results are all that could be desired." Dr. McQuestin, in Pacific Medical and Surgical Journal.

The specific action of Damiana upon these organs is very ably summed up in a paper by Dr. Ignatz Urban in the German Archiv der Pharmacie: Zeitschrift des Deutschen Apotheker-Vereins, when he says that Damiana exercises "a powerful influence upon the URINARY AND Arrival.

GENERATIVE ORGANS OF BOTH SEXES; it increases the flow of urine and arouses and invigorates the lost or enfeebled power of procreation. Where the sexual instinct, as a consequence of injury to the spine, paralysis, onanism, or other undiscovered reasons, has been impaired or entirely lost, and the ordinary remedies, such as strychnine, phosphorus, and electricity, prove inefficacious, Damiana, if continued for two or three months, gives, invariably, reliable and enduring results. Indeed, Dr. Woodward, who has had much experience with the drug, ventures the assertion that if there is any one medicine that can restore the generative function in persons of advanced years, either male or female, that agent must be sought for in Damiana. Moreover, this new remedy possesses a qualification not found in strychnia and phosphorus, namely, it is not poisonous or otherwise injurious. As to the special action of Damiana, American physicians are unanimous in the opinion that the brain and nerves, and, indirectly, the reproductive organs, are markedly influenced by it; but, whilst some assert that the sexual appetite is excited by it in a special and direct manner, others are inclined to think, and amongst these Dr. Woodward, that we have here a stimulating and tonic remedy rather than an aphrodisiac proper."

Touching the more general effects of Damiana on the digestive apparatus and on the brain and nervous system, the testimony of medical writers is singularly accordant. Thus Dr. Caldwell says that "in smaller doses it seems to have a specific effect on ALL THE ORGANS OF

THE PELVIS, giving increased tone and activity to all the secretions of that vicinity."

Again, a writer in the Pharmacal Gazette says that he has found it to be "an alterative aperient of remarkably fine quality; indeed of such a nature that should it possess no other medical value, this alone would place it high in the therapeutical world."

As a nerve-tonic, says Dr. C. G. Polk, it "impresses the brain and nerve centres very much in the same manner that strychnia does. While, however, devoid of poisonous properties, it excites cell-nutrition, and enables the nerve-cell to assimilate its proper pabulum from the blood.

"For the medulla oblongata and the medulla spinalis," he continues, "it has an especial affinity. The motor nerves seem more impressed by its influence than are those of sensation. Hence I inferred that it would prove valuable in paralysis. Opportunities offering, I tested the accuracy of this inference in two cases—one hemiplegic, the other paraplegic. In both, Damiana proved of unquestionable efficacy; the advantage was as unequivocal as I ever witnessed from the use of strychnia and ergot.

"If my theory of its modus operandi—that it acted as an invigorator of the primordial nerve-cell—be correct, it is easy to understand its true place in the treatment of certain forms of paralysis, as well as other nerve-lesions in which deficient cell-nutrition plays an important part. Damiana, by its direct action as a nerve-tonic, by removing the morbid condition or stimulating the cells in inactive conditions, supplies a great want in therapeutics."

In the pharmaceutical journal New Preparations, May, 1879, Dr. A. B. Woodward says:

"It will strengthen and tone up the reproductive organs of both male and female when all other remedies have failed. And through the medium of the brain it tones up the nervous system, especially the sympathetic. Its favorable effects are manifest on the KIDNEYS AND BLADDER as well as on the reproductive organs. It will cure impotency in a short time, almost without regard to age, provided the stomach will bear the size of dose necessary;* and it is not a momentary stimulant, but a permanent tonic, to the reproductive organs. It will remove a certain condition which gives rise to spermatorrhœa, by its tonic effects. And, in short, I say without hesitation that it has been the ONLY SURE REMEDY in my hands for SEXUAL DEBILITY, either partial or complete, the dose and frequency according to the judgment of the practitioner; and if there is anything in the line of medicine that will make an old person, either male or female, young as regards the venereal function, it is Damiana."

IV.—Medical Effects of Damiana Wafers Observed by sundry Physicians in Private Practice.

Dr. Caldwell, writing in the St. Louis Medical and Surgical Journal, relates as follows the case of "T. W., a young gentleman of wealth and somewhat roué," who complained of the loss of virile power. "On examination," says Dr. Caldwell, "I found the history of excessive venery only. The sound exploration failed to discover either stricture or tenderness of the urethral tract. All other functions being normal, I advised him simple rest for a couple of weeks. After due trial he returned, reporting treatment so far a failure." Dr. Caldwell then treated him with Damiana, and the patient, after ten days, reported himself "fully rehabilitated and fully potent."

* Full directions for the use of Damiana accompany each box of the wafers.

Again, "a gentleman aged in the fifties, Mr. D.," called on Dr. Caldwell, "concerning an indescribable pain or sensation about the head, with a loss of power and of all sexual desire. On examination, I failed to find any lesions of the genito-urinary organs, or any functional disturbance of the alimentary canal. I ordered him free use of Damiana, and occasionally, when the pain in the head was severe, application of the constant current of electricity to the nape of the neck, down the spinal column. This treatment was continued several weeks with very fair results."

One more case may be cited from Dr. Caldwell's practice: The patient, D. H., "aged 24, was suffering from spermatorrhœa, which he attributed to masturbation, and from his general appearance I judged he was correct. Further, he suffered from general weakness, nervous irritability, with a dreamy, absent kind of manner; flatulence and constipation; dulness of sight, and perhaps of hearing, weakness of memory, attacks of palpitation, giddiness, headache, and neuralgia. He would keep his bed a week or two at a time, and frequently go days without eating or speaking a word to any one. This condition had existed for a year or more, when his father, fearful that the young man was about to lose his mind (judging from his eccentricities, and from many odd and unusual ways), called my attention to his case, when I obtained the above history.

"I placed him under the best hygienic influence, and required him to make daily calls at my office, when I used moral suasion and encouragement, endeavored to instill better ideas, more manly thoughts and actions, to imbue him with brighter hopes for the future, also instructed his family to put themselves to greater efforts to make home attractive, cheerful, and pleasant to him.

"Medically I relied upon our old and tried friend Damiana, with entire success, though in his case it required better than a year of skilful management to complete the restoration mentally and physically."

A case recorded by Dr. Van Arnum, of Washington, D. C., in the Virginia Medical Monthly for July, 1876, very strikingly exhibits the characteristic action of Damiana:—"M., aged 55 years, had been a widower five years. Six months ago he became enamored of a young woman, proposed marriage, and was accepted, and the day fixed for the wedding. Some weeks since he came to me in great distress, stating that he had been under treatment for inertia of the genital organs, but without benefit. He stated that he had for more than three years been conscious of a loss of virility, and in view of his approaching marriage to a young woman, was most anxious to restore the animal passions and powers.

"I recommended the use of Damiana in doses repeated every four hours. (I will here state that the wedding was postponed for three weeks.) After the use of the medicine for some two and one half weeks, he reported that he was in condition to consummate the marriage act. He was duly married, and is now on his wedding tour."

This case is typical of the influence of Damiana as a restorer of dissipated energies. We could give thousands of similar instances, in which the DAMIANA WAFERS have produced these same results.

The following case illustrates the reparative action of Damiana upon organs that have become atrophied, or wasted. In the journal last quoted, Dr. Summerton, of Sunhill, Ga., relates that he had under treatment a patient aged 27. The patient stated that a few years previously his right testicle became inflamed, compelling him to remain at home for several days. After the swelling left, the testis became atrophied and tender to the touch. He had previously practiced onanism. The sexual desire had nearly left him. On examination the left testis was found to be soft and very small, the other normal. He was placed under the usual treatment—nourishing food, nux vomica, iron, and cantharides, but he did not appear to improve. The doctor then prescribed Damiana, in doses to be administered thrice a day. In a short time the testis began to enlarge and lose its sensitiveness. In the course of a month it had regained its normal size, and its functional activity was restored.

In a case, the history of which is given in the St. Louis Clinical Record, the patient was completely impotent, after an attack of malarial fever. The symptoms remained unchanged under treatment with phosphorus, nux vomica and strychnia. Damiana was now prescribed, three doses daily, with almost instant good effect, and in two months the man was fully restored.

Dr. Boardman Reed, of Atlantic City, N. J., mentions a case nearly identical with that recorded by Dr. Summerton :—

A gentleman, æt. 60 years, had an extremely severe attack of orchitis (inflammation of testicles) of traumatic origin, affecting the left testicle and causing great distension of the scrotum. When the inflammation subsided, the right testicle underwent softening from pressure, and rapidly atrophied, being reduced to the size of a small hazelnut. Dr. Reed treated him with Damiana, at first in the ordinary doses, but subsequently the dose was doubled in quantity. In two weeks he reported marked improvement, and in two weeks more the atrophied testicle was restored nearly to its former size and consistence. Later, he entirely recovered.—(New Preparations, January, 1879.)

"I was called," writes Dr. J. P. Marsh, of Kirkwood, Ill., in the pharmaceutical journal

"Doctor!"

New Preparations, Nov., 1879, "to see a man, æt. 30, medium size, nervo-bilious temperament, married, and father of two children, a farmer by occupation. Found him very much emaciated, and so nervous he could not hold a spoon steady long enough to convey it to his mouth. Made a thorough examination and got the history of his former state of health from his wife. I took a four-ounce bottle of his urine to my office, and tests showed that lurking monster—hidden spermatorrhœa." Next day the patient was put on Damiana treatment, which was continued for six weeks. In that time the patient gained over twenty pounds of flesh. No emissions of semen were now discoverable, and he was feeling very much better. "I have never in my twenty-two years' practice," says Dr. Marsh, "found a remedy so efficient and prompt in its action as Damiana in the treatment of sexual debility of all kinds."

We could quote hundreds of other cases from letters and published articles, but think it unnecessary, as the Wafers will recommend themselves to those who give them a trial.

We may as well add that we receive letters almost daily from people duplicating their orders by mail, in which they speak very highly of the Wafers, saying in many instances: "They are all you recommend them to be." The reader will readily understand why we do not publish these letters, as he or she would hesitate to have their own names appear, even though they were pleased with the results. People wishing to see the original letters, coming from nearly all parts of the world, can do so by calling at our Drug Store, 202 Grand St., New York.

THE MORMON ELDER'S

DAMIANA WAFERS.

Damiana, the plant itself and the usual preparations of it, has a bitter and acrid taste, which makes it intolerable to the majority of patients: oftentimes it produces severe nausea and vomiting. In the WAFERS this valuable medicinal agent is administered under a form which makes it agreeable to the taste of every one. The WAFERS contain in highly concentrated form the Extract of Damiana, of the purest quality, combined with certain other medicinal agents which add to the efficacy of that drug, and they are warranted to produce all the beneficial results mentioned in the foregoing quotations from the writings of scientific physicians. Many of the fearful ailments of life, among which are a dimness of vision, nausea, nervous irritability, headache, lassitude, dyspepsia, general debility, bronchitis, and finally consumption, are to be traced to the derangement of the nervous system, originating in disease of the genital organs. These WAFERS are especially intended for the benefit of those who suffer from this class of nervous diseases, the sequel to which is always Impotence; and if the persons who take them will pay proper attention to the directions, we guarantee our WAFERS to cure in every instance. They contain neither mercury, cantharides, nor any other deleterious drug, and may be taken with perfect confidence by the most delicate of either sex. To the large number of sufferers whose lives are made miserable by the diseases we have named, are not only recommended, but are guaranteed to give immediate help, and while a few doses will show improvement, time and patience may be required to effect a cure. Be particular to follow both the directions and suggestions which accompany the medicine. Persevere in the use of the WAFERS, and in a short time you will feel like a different person.

The Mormon Elder's Damiana Wafers

In short, these WAFERS are a safe, certain, and speedy cure for all the varieties of seminal and physical debility of the generative organs of both sexes, whether constitutional or acquired.

They are furthermore a remedy of infallible efficacy in MALARIA and in NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA, FLATULENCY, etc.; and since the foregoing notice of DAMIANA was written, it has been found that they are highly efficacious as an antidote for TOBACCO and STIMULANTS: and hence, while the patient is taking the WAFERS, he should abstain as far as possible from tobacco and vinous and malt liquors of all kinds, as these are antagonistic to Damiana.

A Word of Caution.

The one thing which checks confidence in the efficacy of Damiana is the fact that many spurious preparations have been put upon the market; as Dr. J. F. Hammond, of New York, justly observes, "The constant disappointment following the employment of the worthless drug has reacted with telling effect upon the genuine." "There are on the market," writes Dr. Willard H. Morse, "several preparations of Damiana; with some of these I have had the experience of failure;" but of the preparation of Damiana contained in the Damiana Wafers he says, "to this I pin my faith."

WHITE DAMIANA WAFERS,

FOR

DISEASES PECULIAR TO WOMEN.

Whatever may be the true cause—whether climatic influences, or too sedentary a mode of life, or neglected physical culture, or a fashion in dress which paralyzes some of the most important muscles of the human frame, and prevents the normal development of the lungs and of the pelvic viscera—American women are a race of invalids. In those States whose population contains the smallest foreign element, the New England States, statistical tables drawn up by physicians who have studied the matter thoroughly show that nearly 70 out of every 100 married women suffer from or Falling of the Womb.

Among unmarried women the ratio of those so afflicted is not so great, but the fact that so large a proportion of the married women suffer from Prolapsus is proof that the physical constitution of American women is fatally weak in the central organ of the female sexual system.

Outside of New England the same evil exists, and that it counts its victims by thousands is a fact known to every woman who has any acquaintance with her sex. There is a host of Female Complaints which, singly or in troops, harass the lives of American women, but the chief of them all is Prolapsus Uteri: its companion-ills, however, are scarcely less formidable, scarcely less influential in making the lives of millions of American women a continuous martyrdom—Whites or Leucorrhœa, Inflammation and Ulceration of the Womb, Painful Menstruation, Suppressed or Irregular Menstruation, Flooding—all showing deficient tonicity of the sexual system, and absolute or relative incapacity to discharge the great function of MOTHERHOOD.

For all these and allied morbid conditions, we prepare a special

a combination of DAMIANA AND CONCENTRATED EXTRACT OF COCA. The Damiana principle in these WAFERS goes direct to the very foundation of all these Female Weaknesses, imparting to the Womb and all its dependencies a healthy, normal, natural tone and vigor; awakening to new life the lethargic procreative instincts; removing diseased conditions of the organs of generation; and imparting to every organ and to every nerve an elasticity, an ease in performing its functions, which constitutes the delight of living. Only when all the organs, and especially the sexual organs, are in proper tone does a person enjoy life. When these are dis arranged, there is ennui, weariness of life, depression of spirits: life is not worth living.

The Concentrated Extract of Coca in the first place serves as a general tonic, especially to the digestive and assimilative apparatus; secondly, it tends to repair the loss of nerve-force resulting from reduced vitality, from emotional excitement, etc. In depression of spirits and hysteric affections; in neurasthenia or general impairment of nerve power; in nervous dyspepsia and neuralgia—all of which are habitual concomitants of Uterine Disease, the Concentrated Extract of Coca, both by itself and more especially in combination with Damiana, goes direct to the root of the evil, giving tone, vigor, and strength, lifting the poor despondent sufferer as if by a miracle out of the Slough of Despond, and imparting to the whole system the elasticity, the buoyancy, the animal spirits which are inseparable from health, but incompatible with a disordered condition of the mechanism of reproduction.

LAXATIVE FRUIT WAFERS.

Nature's remedy for Constipation and kindred ailments, such as Biliousness, Indigestion, Low Spirits, Headache, Dizziness, Torpid Liver, Sallow Complexion, Dyspepsia, Indisposition, and all complaints arising from an obstructed state of the system. A prompt and active medicine, without any of the unpleasant effects which usually attend the use of ordinary remedies. Being free from all crude and irritating matter, their action is gentle, mild and natural, and without the tendency to constipate which pertains to other remedies. Yet, notwithstanding their mild action and purity of composition, these Wafers are much more successful in relieving Biliousness and all Liver Derangements than those medicines which depend on their strongly cathartic properties for their success, as the effect of these crude and drastic mixtures, with their violent purgative action, is to deplete the system, weaken the bowels, and induce Piles, Chronic Diarrhœa, etc.

Of the many complaints in which these

UPB

Wafers have shown most prompt and decided success, none have been more quickly relieved than the various forms of headache, including nervous and sick headache; and it is safe to say that nine cases out of ten of this distressing complaint are due to inactive or sluggish liver, with constipated bowels. A few doses of Laxative Fruit Wafers soon restore these organs to their proper functions, and the headache ceases. In the same manner they regulate the bowels, prevent constipation and piles, relieve all forms of biliousness, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Loss of Appetite, Pain in the Side, Pimples on the Face, Sallow Skin, etc. One Wafer taken immediately after dinner seems to start the process of digestion at once, prevents Dyspepsia and Indigestion, with sour rising of food from the stomach, and relieves the distress caused by too heavy eating. The complexion is often greatly improved by their use, particularly if aided by THE MORMON ELDER'S DAMIANA WAFERS, or WHITE WAFERS.

SANDALWOOD WAFERS,

Containing 13.30 parts Distilled Oil from selected Sandalwood, U. S. D., mixed and solidified with 17.30 parts of pure Solidifiable Balsam Copaiba. Prepared only by F. B. CROUCH, New York City.

"Docuta" Sandal wood, "sweet-smelling wood of the temple," derives its name from being the species of wood used in temple observances in the East Indies. Sandalwood was not much known to English commerce until within a few years ago, and it was almost entirely unknown in the United States until the year 1865 (National Dispensatory) when brought to the notice of the medical profession as a valuable specific in the treatment of GONORRHŒA, since which time it has held an increasingly important place in Materia Medica, indeed fast superseding every other known remedy. The manufacturers of these Wafers, having years of experience in buying and selling the Oil, guarantee that nothing but the purest oil is used in these Wafers, and this doubtless explains the great and continued success these Sandalwood Wafers have had ever since their introduction, notwithstanding the many cheaper preparations offered to the public, most of them worthless as medicine and many of them even injurious, on account of adulteration.

A more complete circular regarding the Sandalwood Wafers will be sent on application.

The MORMON ELDERS SUSPENSORY BANDAGE.

THE MAJORITY OF MEN can wear a Suspensory Bandage with benefit. It will relieve a great many symptoms which though not constituting disease, will cause a great deal of discomfort, such as pain in the back and hips, a dragging feeling and pain in spermatic cord, feeling of weight in lower part of bowels, etc. Wearing a Suspensory will, in a large measure, prevent the development of Varicocele and Hydrocele. Those subject to Varicocele or Hydrocele, are men whom the scrotum is relaxed, either from an inherited tendency, from long sickness, from continued or extra exertion in standing, walking, lifting, etc., from costiveness, or from weakness from any cause whatever. Polo players, Bicycle riders, Athletes, Equestrians, in fact all men when subject to extra or continued exertion in standing, walking, riding, lifting, jumping etc., should wear a Suspensory to prevent injury by straining or bruising. A great many are already resorting to the wearing of suspensories as a matter of comfort, and the number is constantly increasing as the benefit to be derived from them becomes better understood. We make 3 sizes Large, Medium and Small and 2 Qualities $1.00 and $2.00. Satisfaction guaranteed. Try one.
